does this through creating university programs whereby it brings in its member companies and young women from the industry to demonstrate to the female students why this is such an exciting and vibrant industry and why women should join the industry. This is done both domestically and internationally.

2) Internship & New Hire Portal

The GSA has developed a job and internship portal to connect current and aspiring semiconductor professionals to opportunities in the field.

3) Industry Branding

The GSA believes that part of the problem for young students to choose the semiconductor industry is that it has become a "boring" industry, so the GSA puts a huge effort in rebranding the industry away from the deep tech details to tell students that they can design the solution to many of the world's most daunting challenges including climate change, endemic poverty, lack of healthcare, etc. The GSA has created www.designthesolution.org which includes many resources for students and women in the industry and includes the rebranding of the industry.

4) Visibility Campaign

The GSA believes that by showing young women what other women have accomplished in the industry that this will help make this a more attractive industry. The GSA utilizes social media to provide visibility of women in our industry. This platform is very important and is widely praised.

Objective 2: Retain, Develop and Promote Women. This objective is accomplished through the following:

1) Events

The GSA hosts a number of exciting in-person and virtual events throughout the year. The marquee event is Women in Semiconductor Hardware (WISH). This annual conference offers a mix of inspirational and technical topics for attendees to explore, and it is free for students. WISH brings together industry luminaries, technology leaders, entrepreneurs, and university students in STEM to recognize and demonstrate women's technical prowess in the semiconductor ecosystem and celebrate their contributions to the industry.

2) Visibility Platform

Visibility Campaign - The GSA regularly showcases inspirational women in the semiconductor industry on Its Instagram, LinkedIn, and Facebook accounts.

3) Presentations/Marketing

The GSA's CEO is often asked to speak to women's groups including NVIDIA, Micron, Ansys and Analog Devices.

Name of the organization Global Semiconductor Alliance	Employer identification number 77-0376600

4) Resources

The GSA produces other resources, including:

- a. WLI Women's Directory, a comprehensive database of women in the semiconductor industry;
- b. Best Practices Playbook and its accompanying CEO Pledge, which serve as a guide for companies committed to uplifting industry women and closing the gender gap;
- c. Women in the Semiconductor Industry Survey & Whitepaper, a study of gender equality in the semiconductor industry;
- d. WLI Newsletter, a quarterly publication that connects women in the semiconductor industry; and
- e. Woman2Woman, Mentoring Moments for Women in the Workforce, videos which are a resource to current and future semiconductor industry women.

5) Committees

The GSA maintains certain committees for women, including an Entrepreneur Committee, Marketing Committee and New Technical Hires Committee.

6) Women in Hardware Mentorship Program

Women in Hardware Mentorship (WHM) Program - 2023 is the pilot year for this program. This program aims to help mid-career level mentees develop leadership skills and help them advance into leadership roles. The program's goal is to build a support community of women in hardware engineering across the industry and companies to encourage the culture of mentorship and experience sharing.

7) Speakers Bureau

The WLI Speakers Bureau is a comprehensive repository of women qualified and available to speak on business trends, market drivers, and technical issues. Submitting to the Speakers Bureau is a free and member-only benefit. Both GSA and our many members companies pull speakers from this database for various events.

8) Awards

The GSA maintains a number of awards for women, including: Rising Women of

Influence Award, Dr. Lisa Su Woman of Innovation Award, Female Up and Comer

Award and Designing the Difference Award.

Objective 3: Funding for Women-led companies

The WLI also seeks to help women-led companies obtain funding. This is accomplished through the events and committees discussed above. In addition, the GSA's VC Directory, also discussed above, is another valuable resources for women-led companies seeking funding. The WLI also provides speaking opportunities for women and maintains an Entrepreneurial Blog in which WLI spotlights accomplished women in the industry.
